To his millions of fans, Junior measured himself against the audience's response. His family believes it was the driving force that inspired him to sing for six decades from his heart and the deepest depth of his soul. Giving each note, each song, each concert a thundering delivery. Every performance had to be memorable. That is why he asked his family to forego a public funeral or memorial upon his passing. He wanted the memory of brilliance in motion to be his way of saying farewell without saying good-bye. He believed music is the food of love, and to the fans, he would say, "play on -- it's going to be alright. . right on . . . right on."

The family has posted a virtual obituary for fans to read more about Marvin Junior, the man, along with their personal appreciation for the outpouring of love and support received from around the world.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that contributions be made in the name of Marvin Junior. You may send a check to the Division of Cardiology at Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center, 4940 Eastern Avenue, Baltimore, Maryland 21224.
